One school. One sign-in.

ATLAS is the education platform by Lancaster. Classes, student records, people and the school's books are four systems that open with the same account, and share what the school already knows.

01 Academic
Student records

02 Learn
Classes and grades

03 People
HR and payroll

04 Finance

Four systems. One record of the school.

A student admitted in Academic is the same student in Learn. A teacher's clock-in becomes their pay, and their pay becomes a voucher in Finance. Nothing is typed twice.

What is due, what is next and how it is going: one page, for every class.

The week, at a glance.

LEARN · STUDENTS, TEACHERS, PARENTS

Students see their to-do list with due dates, take quizzes and follow their grades. Teachers write lessons, build quizzes and mark attendance. Parents follow each linked child, as far as the school shares.

ATLAS is written in plain JavaScript and runs on Node.js 22, using only its standard library. No framework and no outside packages: every line is Lancaster's own.

Caddy serves it over HTTPS. Records live in one data file with atomic saves; passwords are hashed with scrypt, then encrypted with AES-256-GCM under a key kept apart from the data. Keycloak single sign-on is optional.

EVERY REQUEST PASSES EIGHT CHECKS

1. HTTPS only — Encrypted, with HSTS for a year
2. Address check — Only the school's own address
3. Rate limits — Per person and per network address
4. Same-site only — JSON from ATLAS's own pages
5. Session — A random token scripts cannot read
6. Role and permission — Each route states who may call it
7. Scope — Campus, class and family
8. Business rules — Separation of duties, own records

0 outside packages to install or patch

400 API routes, each with its own access rule

129 automated tests, run before every update is installed

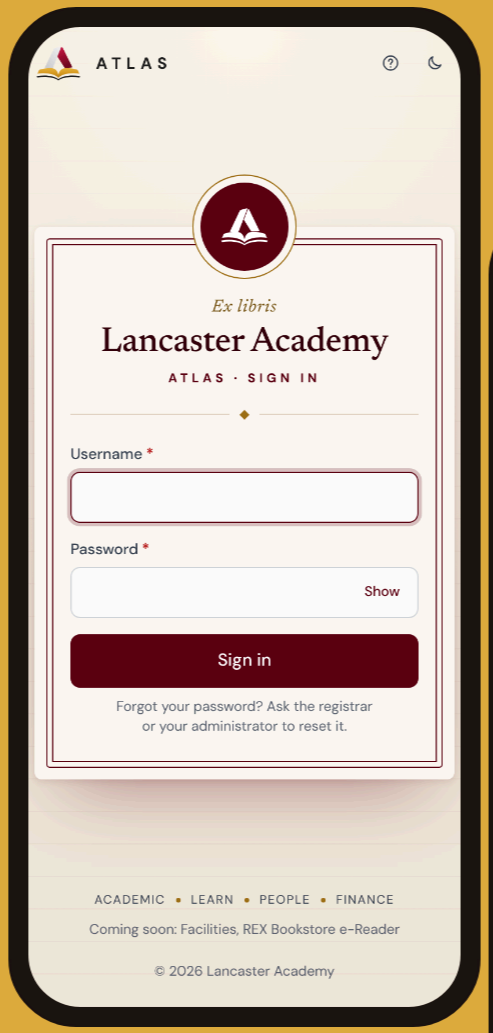

1 server for every system and every campus

In every pocket, day and night.

Every screen works on a phone, in light or dark. There is no app to install.
